CITY TRUSTEES

Various Reports Received—Bid on Franklin Court Rejected—Pool Room Question Revived—Central Avenue Ordinance

All members present. The usual number of demands were made upon the treasury, and referred to committee. Considerable time was devoted to the discussion of the proposed license ordinance, now being digested by committee, but no action was taken. It was directed that the city attorney and the manager of the electric lighting department draw up an ordinance directing that all wires of public utility companies in fire district number one be placed underground within one year. It was ordered that extra lights be placed in the alleys in the rear of the business blocks on both sides of town. The committee to whom the matter was referred reported that the new hose ordered by the city had been delivered. The marshal reported good progress being made in clearing up the parkways, the expense of the same being well within the appropriation made for the work. The matter of painting signs for Maryland avenue and Ninth street (recently Oak drive) was taken up, and the street superintendent was instructed to see that it was done before the next meeting of the board. Mr. E. D. Goode reported that work would be done on changing the curve where the Glendale and Eagle Rock road crosses the Salt Lake track, on Glendale avenue, within a few days. The matter of putting in culverts on Third streets at Verdugo road, Childs tract line and Glendale avenue was referred to the committee on public works. The bid of G. B. Mock for the improvement of Franklin court was higher than the city engineer's estimate for the work, and was rejected. The city attorney made a report on the central avenue proposition; he had seen the superintendent of the highway commission (Mr. Calvert), who assured him that he would use every endeavor to have the whole street included in the good roads plan, and the city attorney recommended a petition from the citizens be allowed to erect a frame booth on the vacant lot just west of the post-office, resulted in considerable discussion, as it was to be located within fire district number one. The petition was denied. Then, on motion, they were allowed a wagon permit upon the payment of license fee, and the marshal was instructed to issue license. A communication was received from John Marvel, asking if the trustees would consider the opening of a pool room which would be conducted in a high-class manner. The matter was referred to the committee of the whole. The matter of moving the building now on the northeast corner of Fourth street and Glendale avenue from its present location to the city lot on the opposite side of Glendale avenue was brought up. On motion, permission was granted as requested, and the building inspector was instructed to give an estimate on the cost of making proper cesspool connections with the building. The ordinance in reference to Central avenue being turned over to the highway commission was taken up, read a third time, and passed. The ordinance announcing the sale of a franchise to E. D. Goode for the construction of an electric railway was read first and second times.

GLENDALE RESIDENTS GET FORTUNE

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Ogg, who have been residents of Glendale for several years, learned a few days ago that their stock, which they purchased twelve years ago for $500 is now worth many thousands of dollars. The company with which they were connected is known as the Mt. Diablo Oil company and the oil lands are located in Kern county.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogg were residing in Saugus, Cal., about twelve years ago when they purchased the stock and shortly after that time the company was compelled to stop operations because of lack of funds. Some time ago Timothy Spellacy, who is running for lieutenant governor on the Democratic ticket leased the property with the view of developing. The land was so reproductive that very soon it was paying big. A few days ago the company of which Mr. and Mrs. Ogg are a part sold their interests in the land for a million and a half of dollars, and, as the Glendale residents are among the largest stockholders in the company, their share was large.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogg will leave next Wednesday for a visit of six weeks among relatives and friends. They will visit in Virginia, Washington and New York.

PRIMARY ELECTION

First Under New Law Johnson Carries the Precinct—McLachlan and Stevens Even—Other Details

Glendale and other voting places throughout the valley may have seen livelier elections than took place on Tuesday last, but never before was so much money spent by candidates. The candidate who did not have automobile or two was certainly not "in it." Candidate Curry was reported as offering through his local management as high as fifty dollars for the day, but it is probable that the one that finally got into service and picked up a dozen votes for him, cost less money. In the Glendale precinct there were over 500 votes registered and the total number polled was 294 which was as large a percentage as has been cast at various times under the old system which cost less money. It is a safe guess that at least 25 per cent of those voting would not have turned out at all had they not been rustled out by the workers. The early morning vote was large but interest lagged during the middle hours of the day until nearly closing time when it got quite lively. No interest was taken in the event except among those voting the Republican ticket. The following figures tell the story of the day: Glenn Curry 12, Ellery 1, Johnson 118, Stanton 94, Lieutenant governor, Farmer 33, Ferris 42, Kessling 12, Wallace 143, Supreme Court, Melvin 100, Sloss 88, Wilbur 187, assistant justice District Court of Appeals, Oster 73, Shaw 109, State senate, Gates 169, Savage 39, U. S. senator, Meserve 67, Spalding 106, Works 118, congress, McLachlan 106, Stevens 106, superior judge, Craig 106, Hervey 103, Finlayson, 87, assembly, Case 76, Cattell 105, Ready 18, justice of peace, Melrose 69, Whomes 151, Lemmert 5, Constable, Catlin 175, Pillsbury 2. A mixed delegation to the county convention was elected consisting of Messrs. R. E. Chase, F. H. Vesper, H. P. Coker and G. B. Woodberry. On the Democratic ticket Theo. Bell received 23 votes. Our local candidate for the assembly, Ray E. Goode, Esq., got the same number. The Socialists polled 4 votes for J. Stitt Wilson for governor and J. Stitt had no automobile either. They elected as delegates to their convention A. M. French, F. A. Slem, P. M. Corbaley and L. C. Wilhite. The prohibitionists were so busy electing Johnson on the Republican ticket that they only polled nine votes for Mr. Meads, their candidate for governor, and did not elect any delegates.

PARTNERSHIP

Once when I was a little boy I slept out in a barn all night, and it was cold, and I shivered and couldn't sleep. But in the next year there was a little dog, and he was cold, too, and he shivered. And I got him over in the barn, and we lay down together, and he snuggled up to me, and I snuggled up to him. And pretty soon we were both warm, and we both slept. I had warmed him, and he had warmed me. And so if a little snuggles a little hope or a little joy or a little desire or a little beauty close up against his ache, why, pretty soon it has warmed him, and he has warmed it. He is stronger and better, and the whole world of hope or joy or beauty or desire is stronger and better for it. —Larry Ho, in St. Paul Dispatch.

THE HIGH SCHOOL

Prof. G. U. Moyse after returning from the mountains up about Acton and other places which he has been visiting with Mrs. Moyse, has gone to Berkeley and Alameda where he expects to spend ten days visiting the schools in those places. The school opens on Sept. 12th and students who have examinations to take are requested to notify Mr. Moyse not later than Sept. 3rd and to appear for examinations on the 8th and 9th. Further particulars will be given later. Mr. Moyse will be glad to meet new students at the High School building during the week previous to the opening. The circular of information regarding the coming year's work will be issued after Mr. Moyse returns home.

Miss Rena Severance, of Sixth street, and Miss Grace James, of North Glendale, will leave Sunday for a week's outing at Follows' Camp.

MR. F. M. BEERS PASSES AWAY

After many months of suffering, Mr. Francis M. Beers passed away last Wednesday morning. Mr. Beers was a member of the G. A. R. and had lived a remarkably active and useful life. Funeral services will be held at the Methodist church Saturday, August 20th, at 2 p. m.

DEATH OF MRS. P. H. BULLIS

Miss P. H. Bullis, one of the pioneers of this valley, died at her residence on Everett street, Glendale, last Monday evening. Mrs. Bullis had been in poor health for several months past. The funeral services were held at the rooms of the Pullman Undertaking Company, at 2 p. m., Wednesday. There was an unusually large attendance of friends and neighbors. Mrs. Bullis was a member of the M. E. church and prominent in all the good work of that organization. The funeral sermon was preached by her old pastor, Rev. C. R. Norton, now of Cucamonga.

DEATH OF MAX MUIR

Mr. Max Muir, who came to Glendale about four years ago for treatment at the Sanatorium, and afterwards became interested here to the extent of purchasing a two and half acre tract on the southwest corner of Fourth and Adams, which he later subdivided and sold, died at his home on Monday morning. Mr. Muir had been a painful sufferer for a year past from the result of a fall, and his health has never been good since he has been in this section. He was a printer by trade, having been for a long time employed in the New York Tribune office when Horace Greeley was alive. He was seventy-nine years old. He leaves a widow, three sons and three daughters. The son, Louis J. Muir, at whose home he died, is a linotype operator in the office of the San Francisco Chronicle.

CONSOLIDATION MEETING AT TROPICO.

Logan's hall at Tropic last Thursday evening was crowded with an interested audience. Mr. Fred O'Brien was the first speaker of the evening and proved to be capable of handling his subject in an interesting manner, making a strong plea for the consolidation of the community into one municipality. He was followed by Mr. Charles Russell who is one of the recent converts to the cause. Mr. Russell said that his questions had been satisfactorily answered and his doubts as to the expediency of the proposition removed. He made a strong plea for consolidation.

Mrs. Kinney treated the audience to a vocal solo, "Mavourneen," and an encore. Mr. Cloworthy spoke in his usual happy vein making a plea for the consolidation of the community. A number of questions were asked by persons in the audience and answered by Mr. F. E. Muehlman and Mr. Wattles. A committee was appointed to look into the legal aspects of the case and get full information to submit to the voters. Adjournment was made to meet on Thursday evening of this week at the corner of Doran and Louise street, North Glendale.

THE NEW FOUNTAIN.

The matter of the erection of the fountain at the corner of Fourth and Brand, has been turned over to a committee, of which Mr. W. A. Anderson is chairman, and bids for the work are now called for. The committee reports about $150 subscribed, of which $123 has been paid in. The total cost will probably be somewhat in excess of the amount subscribed. Cobble stones and tile roof will be the principal features of the structure and it will bear an inscription plate with appropriate legend.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION MEETING.

After about October 10, my temporary residence will be at 1112 West Seventh street, Glendale. My postoffice address will remain as above, for I expect to build a home, next year, in Glendale. I cannot leave Southern California, and especially this most beautiful part of the San Fernando Valley.

BASEBALL.

At Verdugo Park last Sunday the home team beat the Pippins by a score of six to four. It was a good lively game and makes the second time that they have won from this club. On Saturday the Glendale team plays the return game with the California Furniture Club, and on Sunday meets the Pico Heights club.

FAREWELL.

In Memoriam by W. T. Nichols. (On the occasion of the funeral of W. A. Simmons.)

With eyes tear-dimmed by memories' touch, Striving the inward storm to quell, Gazing on scenes you loved so much, We say farewell, kind friend, farewell.

Long years thou wert earth's welcome guest, And tho' her mists thine eyes might veil, From beauties of the spirit's quest, Thy life's great purpose cannot fail.

From earthly anchor, thou art free To seek the higher, fairer shore, And sail its vast eternal sea, To be with those long gone before.

With clearing vision gaze on sky, Whose dome reflects supernal light, Where scenes undreamed ere greet the eye, Revealing paths that lead aright.

To take anew life's golden threads, Which all unbroken span the skies, Where consciousness on ether treads, And love is life's immortal prize!

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

State Employs Engineer Inspector.

Owing to the number of requests from town health authorities for assistance in stamping out typhoid fever epidemics, and for advice on problems of sewage disposal, the state board of health is inaugurating a division of field work which is to be put in the hands of an engineer inspector. When the assistance of the state board of health is asked in cases of typhoid fever epidemics, the engineer inspector will be sent to aid the town or county health officers to determine the source of infection and help stamp out the outbreak.

The state health board finds that many complex situations have arisen because municipalities have failed to secure advice from qualified sanitary engineers. Towns have gone to great expense in establishing sewage plants that are not at all adapted to the situation, and which would not have been recommended if a sanitary engineer had been consulted. A frequent error of this kind is the installation of a septic tank without making provisions for supplementary purification. The septic process is only a preliminary stage of sewage disposal, and the effluent should be run through filtration beds before being allowed to enter streams.

Last year there were approximately 200 less deaths from typhoid fever than there were in 1906. As not more than one case of typhoid fever in ten ordinarily results in death, it is computed that there were 2,000 less cases of typhoid last year than in 1906. This saving of lives and expenditure of money is due in a large measure to the installation of sewage disposal plants that prevent the hardy typhoid bacillus from passing into the streams that supply California towns with water.

ANOTHER NEW BUSINESS BLOCK.

Mr. F. M. Peckham, owner of the Rich property on Fourth street, from the Hurt block west to Isabel street, is having plans drawn for a brick building of two stories, and perhaps four, we are reliably informed.

Two stores at least will be completed at once as fast as contractors can push the work, and it is understood they will be about 25x70 feet in area. One of the stores will be occupied by the Variety Store. Mr. Rambsburgh will enlarge his stock and make the new store up to date in many ways that his present small room will not permit. He also has placed orders for a complete line of toys and holiday goods.

EAGLE ROCK NOTES.

Mrs. E. Hamilton spent the week-end at Pomona.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Schumacher are taking a trip through Arizona.

Miss Bessie Hare has returned from her summer outing in the San Gabriel canyon.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker Gibbs have returned from a week's outing at Hermoso Beach.

Miss Frances Miller has been entertaining a party of friends from Ocean Park for several days.

Mrs. Charles Loomis, accompanied by her daughter, Margaret, are spending a vacation at Coronado.

The two rival tennis clubs of Eagle Rock are planning a tournament to be held on Sept. 9 at the Kennilworth Court.

Real estate sales for the past few days were extraordinarily heavy and many new residences are now in course of construction.

A petition has been signed by the majority of the business people of Eagle Rock to have the stop on the east side of Central avenue on the downtown trip.

The bridge committee of the Pasadena board of trade was investigating the proposed plans for the Eagle Rock bridge and a definite agreement will soon be made public.

A FIFTH CLASS CITY

What it Is and What it Can Do—Some of the Law on the Subject

The agitation for a larger Glendale, gives rise naturally to a number of inquiries as to the difference between a fifth and sixth class city, provided the voters decide to go into the higher class municipality. The mere fact that the population reaches the requisite number (3000) does not in itself constitute a city of the fifth class.

Elections and Officers.

The machinery required for making the change is rather complex and, in the case of Glendale will require at least three elections. First, the vote on the question of consolidation, which cannot be mixed with any other issue; second, a vote to determine whether to become a city of the fifth class. If the proposition is lost, the old officers serve their terms. If the majority vote for a change, then another election must be held to vote on the full set of twenty-one officers. This election must be held within probably ninety days of the one preceding, the new primary law not being explicit in regard to this. The officers elected at that time would hold office until the general election.

The long list of 21 officers is not as serious as it appears at first glance, as 15 of them are members of the three boards, trustees, education and library. The other officials to be elected are, recorder, treasurer, clerk, marshal, attorney and assessor. The board of trustees, consisting of five members, has the power to consolidate the offices of city clerk and assessor, treasurer and tax collector, and the city attorney may be ex-officio city clerk.

Compensation of Officers.

The trustees are to receive no compensation and this does not seem to be qualified as in the case of the sixth class city where by vote of the citizens they may be paid for services. A fixed salary is paid to the treasurer, assessor, marshal, clerk and recorder, and the compensation of the city attorney, superintendent of streets, poundmaster and city engineer is to be fixed from time to time.

School District.

In a fifth class city the municipality forms a school district and controls its schools through its board of education. A street poll tax of two dollars for every male citizen over twenty-one and under sixty years of age is collected in lieu of the state road poll tax, and goes into the school fund.

Street Improvements.

Street improvements are made under practically the same law as that governing in the sixth class municipalities, the cost being assessed to the abutting property. The city may take from the general fund not to exceed one hundred dollars for any one street in a year.

In the event of a sewer fund being created by bond issue, the cost of the sewer is paid one-half out of the sewer fund and the remainder assessed to the abutting property, one-quarter to each side of the street.

Wards.

In the fifth class city, wards not to exceed five may be established and the trustees may apportion the number of trustees to be elected in each ward according to the population and provide by ordinance whether they shall be elected by wards or by popular vote. "This law power however cannot be put into effect until the second election of officers, one year after the vote to reorganize." (This is at least an attorney's opinion.)

Power.

In the fifth class the trustees "may levy and collect annually a property tax, which shall be apportioned as follows: for the general fund, not exceeding 60 cents on each $100; for street fund, not exceeding 30 cents on each $100; for school fund, not exceeding 25 cents on each $100; for sewer fund, not exceeding 10 cents on each $100. The levy for all purposes for any one year to which such funds are applicable shall not exceed one dollar on each $100 of the assessed value of all real and personal property within such city."

And further "to license, for purposes of regulation and revenue, all and every kind of business authorized by law and transacted or carried on in such city, and all shows, exhibitions and lawful games carried on therein; to fix the rates of license upon the same and to provide for the collection of the same by suit or otherwise. To contract for supplying the city with water and electric or other lights for municipal purposes; to purchase, lease or construct waterworks and electric plants and all power machinery, conductors and appliances necessary therefor, and to supply said city with, and to sell to the inhabitants thereof, water, light, heat and power; such purchase, however, requiring a majority vote of the electors."

GLENDALE, CAL., AUGUST 19, 1910

George Freeth, of Venice, Cal., has received a gold medal from congress in honor of his rescue of seven Japanese fishermen from drowning near that place on Dec. 16, 1908. He has to his credit a record of nearly fifty lives that he has saved from death by drowning.

Attention is called to the able article, in this issue, from the pen of Mr. Sidney Dell, entitled "Support the Local Paper." It presents the subject in a new and singularly strong light. Mr. Dell's high standing as a lawyer and as a writer entitles his views to careful consideration.

Hollywood, through its Board of Trade, refuses to accept a five-cent fare to its west city line, as recommended for a compromise by the public utilities commission. It is proposed to bring pressure to bear upon the Los Angeles Pacific Railway Company by means of the weak spots in their franchise, if a five-cent fare is not given to the whole of the original city of Hollywood.

We are informed that the Domestic Gas Company has refused in a number of cases to make connections and supply gas to houses within from 50 to 250 feet of their mains. The use of our streets is given to these public utility companies to enable the people to obtain the article furnished by the companies. To a layman it would appear that they cease to have any rights to the public streets when they refuse to deliver their product upon compliance with their usual terms.

A BAD LAW.

We have referred in these columns before to the ease with which criminals under our laws may easily escape punishment and there has been a recent object lesson given to the people of Glendale along these lines. A young man whose many delinquencies easily put him under the category of the undesirable and who has more than once before been guilty of petty crimes, was convicted about a month ago of a charge which classifies him among the degenerates and sentenced to six months imprisonment. Under a recent law it seems that a condemned prisoner who can get the signatures of the trial judge, the district attorney and the complaining witness to a petition for his release, can be set at liberty. This was done in the case alluded to. It might have occurred to our lawmakers that it is not the duty of prosecuting witnesses or officials to turn criminals loose and that the community at large pays for and should receive the protection of the law. The public has a right to the assurance that when a criminal is convicted, he shall, except under rare and unusual circumstances, serve out his sentence. No prosecuting officer, no judge, nor any prosecuting witness should be given the right to thwart the ends of justice for any merely sentimental consideration.

This paper has no natural sympathy with Senator Aldrich, as against Senator Bristow, in their differences in regard to the tariff, believing as we do that the Kansas senator represents more nearly the ideal tariff system than does the much abused representative of the "special interests" in the United States senate. But no fair-minded person can read the reply of Mr. Aldrich to the charges made by Mr. Bristow, to the effect that the former derived a personal pecuniary profit from an increase of 5 per cent on manufactured articles of rubber, without being convinced that Mr. Bristow's arraignment of the Rhode Island senator was not founded on facts. Senator Aldrich produces a letter from the government expert who recommended the increase on the articles from 30 to 35 per cent, for the purpose of securing a greater uniformity in rates, the increase being a very immaterial one otherwise. He also asserts, with all the details which seem necessary to uphold his statements, that the company he is interested in deals in the raw material only, and instead of controlling the supply, has, on the other hand, an interest in only 6 per cent of the total production. Mr. Aldrich makes the interesting statement that for ten years he has been interested in plans for extracting rubber from shrubs, vines and trees by an improved scientific process, resulting, in Mexico alone, in a yearly production of ten million pounds of crude rubber from the guayule shrub, previously valueless. Altogether, the statement is an entirely satisfactory refutation of Senator Bristow's charges, and should have the effect of causing the American public to pause and reflect before accepting as absolute truth every statement made by enthusiastic reformers.

THE SHOOTING OF GAYNOR.

It is fervently to be hoped that Mayor Gaynor of New York may quickly recover from the wound inflicted by the assassin Gallagher. Mr. Gaynor has proved himself to be, not a professional, but a real reformer, one who does things that are worth while, and does not constantly persist in telling people all about it. He allowed Tammany to elect him to office, and when elected, proceeded to deprive that organization of the valuable patronage system which it had built up by many years of devious scheming and the use of a machine especially designed for the purpose. One of the creatures of this machine was weeded out with other superfluities, and, brooding over what he considered to be his "wrong," finally committed the deed which was to be his revenge for the loss of his "bread and butter." Singularly enough, he did not complain of being deprived of his beer; at any rate, the creature is said to have been under the influence of liquor when the act was committed. But the liquor was not the cause of the act. If any cause outside of the man himself could be held responsible, it would doubtless be found to be the anarchistic output of such papers as the New York Journal or the Appeal to Reason—or, more likely still, the mouthings of the soapbox orator.

The indiscriminate abuse of the rich that is to be heard on the street corners where Socialism is being preached has one sure effect upon the weaker-minded among the unfortunates that listen to it, and that is to create or stimulate thoughts of vengeance to be perpetrated upon the oppressor, and the wonder is that more murders are not committed by reason of this inspiration. Freedom of speech is an excellent thing theoretically, but the speech that incites to violence by appeals to prejudice, as much of this class of talk does, the putting of class against class, and the laying of the sins of humanity upon an indefinite system, while the individual, if he belongs to the speaker's class, may go quite free—this is a dearly bought freedom, for it too often leads to crime.

AFTER THE ELECTION.

As we anticipated, but did not desire, Hiram W. Johnson has been chosen as the Republican candidate for governor. All predictions as to the result in November amount to nothing. The Republican party is certainly in bad shape, but it is not the part of wisdom for anyone to assume that the Democratic nominee, Theodore Bell, can easily be elected. If Johnson should be defeated it would doubtless be not because Republican votes went to his opponent in large numbers, but because the stay-at-home vote proved to be an important factor. Mr. Johnson's campaign was made on such a high and virtuous plane that it left many sore places among the ranks of those in the party who could not bring themselves to think as highly of Mr. Johnson, as he himself does.

At the same time, a few months' time will heal many wounds and the probabilities are that the "Grand Old Party" will get together before November, put Mr. Johnson in the gubernatorial chair and see him do things. Mr. Stanton comes out of the campaign with great credit. Had he been a less strong and independent character, he would have made a combination with and agreed to take orders from one machine or the other, which would have enabled him to win. As it was he was opposed by both organizations and by that large element in the North which did not agree with him on the Japanese question. We regret that Mr. McLachlan was defeated for the congressional nomination. Mr. Stevens is a good man whom we can easily support. He will, no doubt, be elected and wobble around in Washington doing the best that any new member can for two years, and then be succeeded by MacLachlan or another. It is the cheerful, inconsistent, inconsequential way of doing politics that has kept California all these years in the background at Washington. Always it has been the rule to take a congressman out of congress when he began to get really useful. Some of the results of the election in the case of candidates backed by the L-R organization give us satisfaction, notably the selection of Lee Gates for senator and Eshleman for railroad commissioner. In both instances they are a distinct improvement on their opponents, Savage and Summerland. Locally the contest for justice of the peace was interesting. The selection of Judge Melrose to succeed himself should be generally satisfactory, and the large vote polled for Judge Whomes in his own precinct was a high compliment.

THE RIGHT TO LABOR.

It was only a few weeks ago that in various places throughout the United States, from every platform, there was read a document associated so closely with the day being celebrated that to omit a reference to it on the Fourth of July would be to omit the motive inspiring the great anniversary. There is a phrase in the Declaration of Independence, familiar, we hope, to the most of us, which is: "That they (men) are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." In this one phrase is epitomized the very life of the document; the essential motive for its existence. If men are not entitled to all of these high privileges, then the declaration was a delusion and a sham, and the great war of the young nation against the tyranny of a distant ruler was a mistake and a worse than useless expenditure of blood and treasure! But it was not a mistake, and time has demonstrated that the great majority of the people who compose the nation builded upon this foundation principle believe in its vital truth. There is, however, a militant minority among us who show by their actions that they do not accept the assertion made in the words we have quoted, except with limitations.

These are those members of the labor unions, and their sympathizers, who attempt by intimidation and violence to prevent other men from working except upon terms laid down by the labor organizations.

The right to liberty and the pursuit of happiness includes the right to work, to sell one's labor at whatever price is mutually agreed upon between the buyer and the seller, and this right is inalienable; no sophistry can cast doubt upon it, and no individual, alien or citizen, should be permitted by any act to deny it. The city of Los Angeles, in an attempt to protect men in this right to labor unhampered by the actions of others, has passed an ordinance to prohibit the interference of men who will not work with those who elect to do so. It is reported, and events indicate the truth of the report, that the leaders of the labor organizations instructed the men to disregard the law. In any event, the law was in many cases disregarded, and the offenders arrested, and, when tried, most justly convicted. There has been too much temporizing with this subject; individuals and the press have refrained from giving honest expressions of opinion in regard to it, while the sympathizers with a lawless minority have been more outspoken. It is to be hoped that the attempt to impose upon Los Angeles the disgraceful conditions in regard to labor which prevail in San Francisco will be sternly opposed in the future, as it has been in the past, and that the right of a man to sell his labor for a remuneration satisfactory to himself will be generally recognized and permanently established. This being done and universally acceded to, there will still be ample work for the labor unions to do in laboring for the uplifting of not only the members of their own near circle, but of their fellow men in every sphere of life.

SUPPORT THE LOCAL PAPER.

Some Business Reasons Stated.
By SIDNEY DELL.
Of the Los Angeles Bar.
This community, every distinct community, needs to know what labor is for hire in its midst and what local products or property are for sale, and likewise, to know who wants to hire that labor or to buy those products or that property.

A cheap, convenient, complete and sure medium for this exchange of such information would, it is conceded, be of very great value and the firm establishment therein of such a medium, should be a subject of universal concern in that community.
So, too, such a medium for the exchange of the news or information about the details of the lives of our neighbors, the legitimate "gossip," so to speak, of the community, is not only of great interest to every thoughtful citizen but it is a highly important element of the social fabric and of civil government. Both society and government are crude and highly imperfect in any new community—a mining camp, for instance, or the like—where no one is acquainted with the antecedents and character of its individual members. The more intimate such knowledge, the more perfect is the society and civil government.

Some may sneer at "gossip," but this intimate knowledge of the outgoings and incomings, the doings and sayings, of the neighbors is the basis of society, and of good government. Old and settled communities are the best because of this more intimate knowledge of the neighbors that enables the community to properly estimate, "size up," individual character. These are fundamental truths of every day life. These two features of community information may seem trifling to some, but they are of the highest value to each citizen and of infinite importance to the public weal. There is but one possible perfect medium of exchange for that information. That medium is the local newspaper.

The great daily cannot, possibly, supply that field. Take our five Los Angeles dailies, for example. The greatest of these only reaches about one-fifth of this or any community. Its great size, 16 to 40 pages, makes it impossible for any one to read even all its "ads." It thus fails, and must always fail, to be a complete medium of exchange of local wants. Besides, its necessarily heavy tolls preclude its use for the small needs of a local community. Manifestly, it cannot "fill the bill," as a medium of exchange for the "wants." Its sphere is limited to the larger concerns. The same is true, of its local news. It has a hundred communities to serve. It is impossible for it to use items of strictly local interest to any one of these communities. Its items must have, at least, a country-wide value. Manifestly, the great daily cannot "fill the bill." The local newspaper alone can supply this primal need of business, of social and of public life.

Suppose every family in the Glendale community (including all the eastern end of San Fernando valley, some 10,000 people), took the GLENDALE NEWS—an unusually valuable local newspaper. With each issue every home would be enabled to know the business wants of every other home in that community. If the cook-lady had suddenly quit or the wash-lady was sick or a carpenter was needed, or a farm hand, or if the egg-farmer wished his wares to reach the notice of consumers or fanciers, or labor needed some one to hire it or a family needed wares owned by its neighbors, the NEWS, on any day of its issue, would inform every resident of these wants. Every family would have it and would read all its contents because of its small size. Its tolls for "ads" and subscription, too, being trifling, would prevent its being a burden to any one. In fact, it would be as indispensable as the house broom. There is, thus, no reason why every member of this community should not become a careful and interested reader of the local newspaper.

It follows that it is the ideal medium of exchange of "wants" in each community. The same is true of it as a purveyor of the local news. It only needs to educate public opinion as to its great value to each individual, and thus to arouse a public spirit, in order to put the GLENDALE NEWS into every home of the Glendale community. The basis of public spirit is the clearly understood value of a "want" to the individual. The high value of such a medium to each resident is manifest. If each live man or woman in each small neighborhood should make himself or herself a committee of one to get all his near neighbors to subscribe for the NEWS it would quickly result that, practically, every resident of the Glendale community would become a reader of our local paper, creating an ideal situation of vast value to all. Since the owner of the GLENDALE NEWS is financially interested in securing such a beneficial result for this community, it is most likely he would willingly give to each canvasser, as a special incentive to public spirit, one-half of each subscription price to be credited on his account. The suggestion is offered as one means for giving this community the blessing of a perfect medium of exchange for its mutual wants and an ideal purveyor of all the local news upon which good government and good society are founded.

The community is the very basis of the social and political fabric. This is strongly attested by the recent awakening of the American people to the vital importance of the long-neglected party primary—the primary assemblies of the people, the real source of government, the abode of sovereignty in any republic. Some day, my town hall primary system, based on the grand New England township system of civil government, as set forth in my forthcoming book entitled "The Woman and the Law in California and the Town Hall Primary," may put all these important concerns under the care of a local community, township legislature in the political unit; and, incidentally, establish on a sure foundation, the local newspaper, as the most important agency for upbuilding the community. Meanwhile, voluntary action and public spirit should be invoked, in a well-directed scheme, to build up the local newspaper as the most potent factor of good government and modern civilization. The principals herein set forth apply to every community. The local paper owes it to the country and to itself to instill these truths in the public conscience.

"Patronize Home Industry" is a popular slogan. It is really founded upon the same vital principle of community interests. What helps one helps all in a community. A signal instance of which (in another state) I once witnessed, wherein a large dairy community was lifted from the verge of the poor house and made a main pillar of the county—a story I may give some day in detail. Still, the doctrine may not be carried to the extent of demanding individual sacrifice for the public good. Patriotism is loth to go that far in support of a non-paying industry. It is useful that the local supply shall be as good as may be had elsewhere at the same price. Take my own case as a resident Glendale attorney. Though it is of manifest importance that the Glendale community should build up a reliable law office here, yet I would not think of asking patronage except for service as reliable and charges no greater, or even lower, than could be had in Los Angeles.

But in the case of the local newspaper there can be outside no rival in its sphere. If every home in the Glendale community received the GLENDALE NEWS each week it would put each home in close touch with every other home therein. It would create an ideal situation that would make a truly greater Glendale more quickly than any other possible agency. So must it be. The GLENDALE NEWS is worthy of support on that line. Let us all unite to increase its value to the Jewel City in her aspiration to leadership among the suburbs of the mighty City of the Angels.

His Game Won.

In a campaign in Kansas some years ago, when the tariff was made a dominant issue, an old German was running for a county office in central Kansas. He didn't know enough about the tariff to talk about it two minutes. More than that, he didn't care much, for it had nothing whatever to do with the office he wanted anyway. But the voters were much excited over the question and seemed to think that every candidate should be able to discuss the problem from A to Z.

So this German and his campaign manager invented a successful subterfuge. When the German got up at the meetings to talk he would say: "Now, gentlemen, I will talk mit you about der tariff. It is like—"

Just then his campaign manager would interrupt: "Why, John, you have only five minutes to talk. You cannot do yourself justice in that length of time on the tariff."

"Then I won't talk about der tariff," would be John's inevitable reply, and he would go on to tell that he wanted a certain county office, and so on. His game won, and he was elected.—Kansas City Journal.

Wheat Does Not Grow Wild.

The existence of names for wheat in the most ancient languages confirms the evidence of its great antiquity and of its cultivation in the more temperate parts of Europe, Asia and Africa. From the evidence adduced by botanists of high standing it seems highly improbable that wheat has ever been found growing persistently in a wild state, although it has often been asserted by poets, travelers and historians. In the "Odyssey," for example, we are told that wheat formerly grew in Sicily without the aid of man. Dioscorus repeats the tradition that Osiris found wheat and barley growing promiscuously in Palestine, but neither this nor other reputed discoveries of wheat growing wild seem at all credible, seeing that it does not appear to be endowed with the power of persistence except under continued culture.

The Mind During Sleep.

"During sleep," says an authority on mental subjects, "the workings of the mind are under no control, and yet it seems to have a wonderful faculty of building up and arranging scenes and incidents. I remember once having a vivid dream of going into a house the furniture and inmates of which belonged to the middle ages. So clear was the dream that I had no difficulty in recalling it, and then as I went over each detail of dress, armor, jewelry, ornaments and other objects seen in my vision I realized that everything I had beheld was historically accurate—that is to say, that probably in a fraction of a second my mind had conjured up a scene to construct which, with the same faithfulness to detail, while awake would have taken me several hours."

The Use of Condiments.

In an article on the use of condiments the London Lancet, the foremost British medical publication, says: "The classic experiments of Pavlov have shown how important is the role of the condiments in diet, how it is they improve appetite and increase digestive power. Mustard, pepper and salt, used, of course, in sensible amounts, assist the appetite, give a zest to food and partly by reflex action as well as local action stimulate the flow of digestive juices and insure healthy assimilation. Even vinegar is known to have a softening effect on tough fibers, and hence its use is justified in so many instances."

The English Pheasant.

It is claimed that the pheasant of the English preserves can trace its pedigree directly to the brilliant bird of the same species in Japan. About the middle of the nineteenth century a few live pheasants were brought from Japan and crossed with the common species. The result of this was, it is said, that a new race of birds was introduced, and the beautiful pheasant, with its iridescent plumage, was produced and naturalized as an English bird.

Goals of Fire.

"I thought," said he, "that those people treated you so badly, and now see! They invite you to their reception. Shall you go?"

"Why, certainly," said she. "Their inviting me showed they harbored no grudge against me for the way they treated me."—New York Press.

Well Answered.

"Oh, no; I don't claim to be any different or any brighter than the balance of mankind. I expect I shall marry some fool woman some of these days."

"If you ever marry that's the kind of a woman you will marry, all right."—Rochester Union.

A Telltale Touch.

"Is it true that sightless people can tell the color of things by touch?" some one asked a blind man.

"Occasionally, yes," came the answer. "If, for instance, I touched a red-hot poker I could tell it was red."

Swift's Sarcasm.

"My brethren," said Dean Swift in a sermon, "there are three sorts of pride—of riches, of birth and of talents. I shall not now speak of the latter, none of you being liable to that abominable vice."

The Fat Woman's Ring.

The woman showed a fat finger in whose folds of flesh was imbedded a plain gold ring.

"How much will you let me have on this ring?" she said to the pawnbroker. "I can't tell until you take it off so I can weigh it," he said.

She tugged at the ring. It wouldn't come off.

"Can't you get it off for me?" she asked.

The pawnbroker threaded a needle with strong linen thread, soaked the needle and slipped it head first under the ring toward the hand. Then he wound the long end of the thread tightly and evenly around the finger almost to the nail. That done, he took the needle and unwound the thread from the base of the finger out, and as he unwound the ring slipped off. He weighed the ring.

"Two dollars," he said.

"That won't do me any good," said the woman. "I can get $3 any place else."

He returned the ring.

"She didn't really want to pawn it," he said. "She just wanted somebody to take the ring off. A jeweler would have done it the same way, but he would have charged something."—New York Sun.

Mythical Creatures of Japan.

The Japanese believe in more mythical creatures than any other people on the globe, civilized or savage. Among them are mythical animals without any remarkable peculiarities of conformation, but gifted with supernatural attributes, such as a tiger which is said to live to be a thousand years old and to turn as white as a polar bear. They also believe in a multitude of animals distinguished mainly by their size or by the multiplication of their members. Among these are serpents 900 feet long and large enough to swallow an elephant, foxes with eight legs, monkeys with four ears, fishes with ten heads attached to one body, the flesh of which is a cure for boils. They also believe in the existence of a crane which, after it has reached the age of 600 years, has no need of any sustenance except water.

Blamed the Last One.

A man who from all appearances had dined well, but not wisely, bought a ticket at the box office of a theater where a farce was being produced in German. The man settled comfortably back in his seat, smiling at the pretty stage setting and evidently prepared to enjoy an evening of pleasant diversion. After a time he began to look worried and leaned forward in his seat.

"Strangest thing ever experienced," he muttered.

A few minutes later he left the theater. At the door the ticket taker offered him a return.

"Nope; don't want it," he said as he brushed it aside. "Guess that last drink went to my head. Can't understand a damned thing them people a-sayin'. I'm goin' home to bed."—Philadelphia Times.

Extravagant Mourning.

Pepys' diary has this on the mourning customs of the time: On Sept. 22, 1660, when there was mourning for King Charles' brother, the Duke of Gloucester, he bought a pair of short black stockings to wear over a pair of silk ones for mourning. Next day "came one from my father's with a black cloth coat, made of my short cloak, to walk up and down in." The problem of mourning for men must have been greater than it is now in those days, when ordinary masculine costume was less somber. On this occasion Pepys records seeing "the king in purple mourning for his brother." There is one mourning extravagance of the early eighteenth century which would scarcely commend itself to the soles of the shoes used to be blacked.—St. James' Gazette.

The Two Occasions.

At a Scotch temperance meeting an old man, scarcely celebrated for his sobriety, arose and after addressing the audience upon the desirability of moderation in all things, remarked:

"My friends, there's just two occasions when I tak' whisky."

There was a chorus of "Ahs!" in the audience, when he continued, "I only tak' whisky when I hae baggis for dinner, and the only other occasion when I tak' whisky is when I hae no baggis for dinner."

Suspicious.

It was down in the market district. "What this country needs is plenty of bone and sinew," said the tall one.

"Yes, and plenty of grit and sand," echoed the short one. "By the way, what business are you in?"

"Oh, I'm a butcher. And you?"

"Wh—er—I distribute strawberries when they arrive from the southern markets."—Chicago News.

The Epicurean Badger.

The badger is a great epicure in eggs, and much of the hostility of gamekeepers to this animal lies undoubtedly in the fact that it will, when it gets the chance, devour a whole nest of partridge or pheasant eggs. Badgers are said also to be fond of honey, and, knowing the extraordinary craving of their South African cousin, the ratel, for this delicacy, I should say it is not improbable that they may occasionally partake of it. It is certain that these animals have a particular liking for the nest and larvae of wasps and wild bees, digging down with strong feet and infinite perseverance till they attain their object. These animals are said by keepers to kill and devour freely young rabbits. That they do partake of this fare at times is, I think, certain, but that they destroy any very considerable number is more than doubtful. Still, the badger is carnivorous in his tastes and is not, even by his kindest friends, to be absolved from devouring at times tender rabbits when he can get hold of them.—Westminster Gazette.

Strange Fishing Matches.

In the olden time in England lords and ladies sometimes invented queer amusements. They were always on the lookout for some novelty, and one of the strangest they discovered was fishing by a goose. A line with a baited hook attached having been fastened to the goose, tied to its leg, she was swung into the water from the boat in which were all the gay lords and ladies. Then, when a pike caught the bait, she was sport indeed, a royal battle between bird and fish, and all the time, between the loud splashing, wheelings and floundering, the on-lookers in the boat giving vent to their feelings in cheers, handclappings and handkerchief waving. But the goose was usually the victor and ended the struggle by landing its prisoner on the shore, where its quack-quack as it cleared itself from the line and waddled away ended the scene. The lake of Monteth, in the southwest of Perthshire, was often the scene of such angling matches.

The Soldier Ant.

The lion is the king of beasts, but all of his magnificent strength and ferocity would avail him nothing when he faced a mere ant. But this ant is not the usual kind which peacefully goes about its domestic duties day by day. It is the terrible driver or soldier ant, said to be the most invincible creature in the world. Against these tiny enemies no man or band of men, no lion or tiger, not even a herd of elephants, can do anything but hurriedly get out of the way. Among the Barotse natives a favorite form of capital punishment is to coat the victim with grease and throw him before the advancing army of soldier ants. The quickness with which the poor wretch is dispatched is marvelous when it is considered that each ant can do nothing more than merely tear out a small particle of flesh and carry it off. Yet in a surprisingly short time the writhing victim will have been changed into a skeleton.

Old Saws and Sayings.

A few old sayings on the subject of food come to us rather as a surprise in our age of daintiness and refinement, yet they have their reason d'être notwithstanding. "Meat is much, manners are more." "Cease your chatter and mind your platter." "The ass that brays most eats least." "The wing with the liver to him who's the giver." "He can give little to his servant who licks his own trencher."

Appropos of this remark, it is amusing to note that "manners" was the name given to the remnants of a meal. These came to the servants as official perquisites; hence our well worn expression before emptying a dish, "Leave the last slice for whatever it may be for manners," though if votes were collected on this point it is hardly likely that any of us would have taken it as it stands in the original.

Carthage's Great Snake.

The ancients firmly believed in monster serpents of all kinds and of both the land and marine species. During the wars with Carthage a great snake is said to have kept the Roman army from crossing the Bagradas river for several days. The monster swallowed up no less than seventy Roman soldiers during this combat and was not conquered until a hundred stones were fired upon it all at one time. The monster skull and skin were preserved and afterward exhibited in one of the Roman temples. The dried skin of the creature was 120 feet in length, according to Pliny.

Throat Trouble.

"You look bad, old man. What's the matter?"

"Throat trouble."

"I didn't know you were subject to it."

"Yes, I am. This throat belongs to the newcomer in the next house, who practices singing at all hours of the night."

Past Is Past.

Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities, no doubt, creep in. Forget them as soon as you can.—Emerson.

"Yes, but everybody knows it out there."—Life.

Respond to Blue Eyes.

Every little while physiologists come to the front with some advantage according to people who have blue eyes. "Well, I disabed the city salesman. 'Well, I disabed a point that they have never covered. A jeweler told me. He is manager of the jewelry department of a big store. I applied to him for a situation for my wife's cousin."

"What's the color of her eyes?" he asked.

"Brown," I said.

"Bring her down and I will take a look at her," he said, "but I am afraid she won't do. People with a certain shade of blue eyes make the best jewelry salesmen. Many customers who buy jewelry want some one to try it on so they can get the effect of the stones when worn. There is something about deep blue eyes that brings out the best lights in most jewels. Take notice and you will find that two-thirds of the jewelry salesmen in New York have blue eyes."—New York Times.

Stingy Queen Bess.

Every one who ever did anything for Queen Bess seems to have been left with a bad debt on his books. So we find an unfortunate John Conley writing to Sir Robert Cecil that for the last two years he had been suitor for £100 for "bees for the army" and complaining that "unless some order be taken I shall be undone." Sir Edward Hastings, after spending his life in serving the queen, had to pawn his wife's jewels and beg her majesty "to bestow something upon me in this my latter age." So badly was the fleet that beat the armada provisioned that Francis Drake had to seize at Plymouth ninety bags of rice, and the unfortunate owner, after ten years' waiting, was refused payment, "rice being an extraordinary victual not allowed for the navy." Nor did common soldiers fare better. The chief anxiety of all Elizabeth's ministers ought, in her view, to have been how to save most money.—London Telegraph.

An Unnecessary System.

"You ought to have a burglar alarm system in your house," said the electrical supply agent, "so that you will be awakened if a burglar raises one of the windows or opens a door at night."

"No burglar can get in here while we are peacefully sleeping," replied Mr. Newpop. "We are wearing our baby."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

IV.—The Modern Farm Home.

By C. V. GREGORY.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

ONE of the chief reasons why the girls and women of the farm have occasionally longed in the past for the city is because of the more convenient homes that were found there. Many a farm woman has had her life shortened by carrying water from the well or the spring, bending for hours at a time over steaming washtubs and doing other hard labor from which the women in town long ago were emancipated. Today the modern farm home is fully as well supplied with conveniences as the house in the city, and

CONVENIENCE IN THE FARM HOME—A WASH ROOM IN THE CELLAR.

It is done at less cost. The reason that more homes are not provided with such conveniences is that the farmers have grown used to doing without them. They look forward to retiring and moving to town, where they can have all the modern conveniences. When they get there they will pay dearly for them in the form of house rent. To have them in the country means a direct cash outlay, and too often the farmer pleads that he cannot afford it. A little figuring would convince him that he need not do without a few of these conveniences that make life so much more pleasant for the whole family.

The first consideration in most parts of the country is the heating system. Farmers are getting out of the habit of using stoves, as they are finding that the added convenience of a furnace or hot water heater, together with the saving of coal or wood, will pay for the installation. With a heating system of this kind all the coal, and dust incident to building and keeping up the fire in the cellar. The whole house can be heated for about what it costs to heat two or three rooms with stoves. There is no need of crawling out of bed into a cold room in the morning. A pull on the chain will open the draft, and in half an hour or so the house is warm. The kitchen also can be heated from the cellar, and an oil stove can be used for cooking. An oil stove takes up less room, saves fuel and is much more comfortable to work over in the summer time.

A furnace has the advantage of cheapness. It also furnishes fresh air to the rooms, if properly put in. For an eight room house a furnace can be put in for about $150. A hot water system for the same house would cost a trifle more than twice as much. The hot water system has the advantages of being cleaner and keeping a more uniform heat. Cheap coal will work well in the boiler, thus considerably reducing the expense for fuel.

The next consideration is the water system. A good water supply under pressure is not only a convenience, but also a form of insurance, since each farm must furnish its own fire protection. Some farm buildings are built now of concrete and hollow tile, but even then there is always some danger of fire. An elevated tank is one of the best means of supplying pressure. Some of the modern types of silos are being built with a tank on top. A method that is as convenient, though a little more expensive, is a pneumatic tank in the cellar. The water is pumped into this and the air in the silo compressed. The air pressure will lift the water to all parts of the house.

For power to pump the water a windmill may be used, or a hydraulic ram if running water is obtainable. The most reliable power is a gasoline engine. Nearly every really up-to-date modern farm has its gasoline engine, which can easily be made to combine pumping with its other duties. With a little added expense the water system can be made double, so that both hard and soft water can be obtained. For the bathroom and the kitchen sink hot water is needed also, which can be provided by a heater in the range or by a separate oil heater.

With a good water system installed the work of the housewife is reduced

50 per cent. Cold and hot water, either hard or soft, is always at hand for use in the kitchen. The dishes can be piled into the sink and washed in almost half the time it took previously. A wash room with permanent tubs can be provided in the cellar. The washing machine can be run with the gasoline engine or with a water motor. While a room of this kind may not make washing exactly a pleasure, it will reduce the labor more than half. With a little planning a small tank can be arranged in the kitchen, so that all the water that is pumped for the stock will pass through it. This is almost as good as an icebox.

A good bath and toilet room is a great convenience to all the family. A shower bath in one corner of the barn will be greatly appreciated by the boys at the close of a hot day's work.

The wastes from the kitchen sink and from the wash room can be run into a tile and taken away. For the wastes from the toilet room a sewage disposal plant will have to be provided. The most convenient method is the septic tank. This is an underground cement lined brick tank divided into two compartments. As one compartment fills it overflows into the next. Nearly all the solid substance will be destroyed by bacteria, and the water that flows out at the lower end can be disposed of through a tile drain. The entire cost of a water system such as the one described, with the compressed air tank, together with the sewage disposal plant, need not be much more than $250.

The cheapest method of lighting the farmhouse is by acetylene gas. This gas is generated by a machine in the cellar and can be piped to all the rooms and to the barn. If desired it can be used also for cooking. The average cost of installing an acetylene plant is about $200. This includes lights in the barn and in the yard. It costs little to run an acetylene plant after it is once in. The average cost is about a cent for a sixteen candle power light for four hours. Acetylene is the nearest like daylight of any kind of artificial light and is incomparably better than the old fashioned oil lamp. The newer types of acetylene lamp are provided with a battery, so that they can be lighted by merely turning a button.

By going to a little more expense electric light can be had on the farm. If a gasoline engine is already at hand the total cost of installing an electric plant, with lights in house and barn, need not be more than $375.

A few electric fans will make the house comfortable in hot weather. One convenience of the city, ice, is still lacking. The way the ice problem is most satisfactorily handled in the country is for half a dozen neighbors to build a co-operative icehouse. The men club together and fill it in the winter, and a plentiful supply of ice is at hand all through the summer. With a small additional expense a cold storage room can be built in connection with the icehouse for keeping meat, poultry, eggs and fruit. In a number of communities co-operative fresh meat societies are successfully run. The members take turns killing a beef or a hog, and fresh meat is supplied all through the year at much less cost than it could be obtained in the city.

The cost of a heating system, a wash room, a vacuum cleaner, a hot water attachment and other devices of that sort is the same in the country as in the city. The cost of the water and sewage system in the country is about $250. The cost of operating a water system in the country is much less than the cost of city water.

An electric lighting system for the farm will cost from $375 up. The life of such a system can be figured safely at twenty years. The storage batteries will not last so long, but the rest of the apparatus will last longer. This would mean an annual depreciation of $18.75. Interest at 6 per cent would amount to $22.50. The cost of operating the plant will depend, of course, on the amount of electricity used. The cost for lighting the average farmhouse and barn for a year and furnishing electricity for sundry other purposes will not average more than $10 for gasoline. This makes the total cost for electricity $41.25 a year. In the city the average cost for electricity for an eight room house is about $50 a year.

The cost of an icehouse and of putting up ice varies so much with conditions that it is hard to give any general figures. These can easily be obtained for any particular locality, however.

ever. It is seldom that ice put up in this manner costs as much in the country as in town.

The farm home can be fitted with hot water heat, hot and cold water, bath and toilet room, electric lights, wash room in the cellar, etc., for $1,000. The interest on $1,000 is $60 a year. Ten per cent for depreciation and repairs is $100 a year. The saving in coal will pay for the cost of running the lighting and water systems. For $100 a year the farm home can be provided with every modern convenience that the city home possesses.

By using a furnace and an acetylene system the annual cost can be lowered to about $85. The city man pays that extra $7 to $14 a month and more in increased rent and thinks nothing of it. The farmer is beginning to realize that it is possible for him to live better, and he is rapidly taking advantage of the opportunity.

What It Achieved

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Ed Archer and Molly Doyle were as children one of those couples who like to read about, but the stories of whose loves are rarely finished by marriage.

There was something enduring about the affair between Ed and Molly. At any rate, it lasted till Ed went away to college, and that is about as long as child loves usually last. In this case, there was nothing on either side to indicate that during Ed's college course love was smoldering in his breast or that of his child love. There was no correspondence between them, and if either ever thought of the other no one besides themselves knew it. They missed each other when Ed returned for the only vacation he spent at home, and when he was graduated as a civil engineer a position was ready for him, of which he at once availed himself. Therefore they did not meet from the time he began his studies till two years after he had been bucking against the world.

When they did meet Ed was paying attention to a young widow of means. His mother was not well, and he left his work and his charmer to pay the mother a visit. While at home he called on Molly Doyle.

Now, it happened that Molly and Ed's widow had a mutual friend. So when Ed appeared Molly knew all about his intentions, or at least what appeared to be his intentions.

She came down to meet him with a letter in her hand. After greeting him she threw the missive on a table. It was addressed and stamped ready for the mail. Molly wrote a large hand, and it didn't require a microscope to read the name of the person for whom the letter was intended. Indeed, one could decipher it from across an ordinary sized room.

Molly was not especially cordial. She did not let it appear that she expected any return of that sweet interchange of sentiment which marks a child love. Ed made approaches toward speaking of it, but met with no encouragement. The conversation turned upon Molly's friend, who was also the widow's friend, and this led to some mention of the latter, but Molly did not speak of her as a matter of interest to her or her visitor. If she had any feeling about the widow she didn't show it.

Ed's call lasted a couple of hours. When he arose to depart he asked:

"Is the letter on the table for the mail?"

"It is."

"Let me post it for you. I pass the office on my way home."

"Thank you very much."

She handed him the letter. He put it in his pocket and took leave.

The next evening he called, bringing with him some flowers. Molly softened a little at the gift. When he spoke of how many flowers he had given her when they were children she said that now he spoke of it she remembered them very well.

"By the bye," said Ed, "on leaving you last evening I was so engrossed with the pleasure of meeting you again that I forgot to post the letter you committed to my care. I have brought it back to you, thinking that after the delay you might wish to reconsider sending it."

There was an odd look in Molly's eye and a faint tinge of color in her cheek. Instead of looking disturbed over Ed's forgetfulness, she looked rather pleased.

"Tonight as you pass the office will you do as well," she said and spoke of other matters.

The next evening Ed called again. This was three evenings in succession. He brought her a more substantial gift than flowers—a glove box, hand-somely inlaid. She received it graciously.

"It is for atonement," he said.

"Atonement for what?"

"A bad memory. Again I have forgotten to drop your letter in the mail."

She gave him a forgiving smile—what else could she do after the atoning gift?—and said:

"Oh, it doesn't matter. Put it in as you go by tonight."

"You are very kind not to scold me. I shall keep my mind on it from the time I leave you."

"On the mailing or the letter?"

"The letter."

This evidently meant something more than the words, for Ed spoke them with his eyes fixed on her intently, and she dropped hers to the floor.

During the next call Mr. Archer made upon Miss Doyle he made no mention of the letter—at least until he arose to go. He brought her a gift, but kept it in his pocket till his visit was finished. He had a great deal to say about their childhood days—more, indeed, than he had to say about the eight or nine years that had passed since, during which he had made no effort to communicate with her or to see her. Indeed, on this latter subject he maintained a discreet silence.

It was near midnight when, having told her that he had loved her ever since he was a boy and could never love any one else, he took out his gift—a ring—and slipped it on her finger. She made no objection, since she had consented to a betrothal. Before leaving he threw the letter he had again failed to post on the table.

"Did it contain a 'Yes' or a 'No'?" he asked.

She opened it and displayed a sheet of blank paper.

Presence of Mind.
A visitor to an insane asylum was walking in the grounds when a man came up to him and entered into conversation. After talking about for some time, discussing topics suggested by the place, the two set out on a tour of inspection, the man, apparently an official, inviting the visitor to go over the asylum. At length they reached the foot of a flight of steps, up which the guide led the way, and at the top the visitor found himself out upon the roof, a height of more than a hundred feet from the ground. As they gazed below his companion started him suddenly by proposing to see who could jump farthest toward the grounds! Not until then had it dawned upon the visitor that his guide was mad. Merely he was a man of ready wit, and his wit saved the madman's life. "Oh, anybody can jump down," said the visitor. "Let us go down and see who can jump to the top." The madman thought it a good idea, and, retracing their steps, the two began their jump from the earth instead of from the roof.

The Mammoth Cave Rat.
The cave rat found in the Mammoth cave is of a soft bluish color, with white neck and feet. It has enormous eyes, black as night, but quite unprovided with an iris. These eyes are perfectly insensible to light, and when the experiment has been made of catching a cavern rat and turning it loose in bright sunlight it blunders about, striking itself against everything, is unable to provide itself with food and finally falls down and dies. In its native depths, however, it is able to lead a comfortable enough existence, as its enormously long whiskers are so extremely sensitive that they enable it to find its way rapidly through the darkness. The principal food of the cavern rat consists of a kind of large cricket of a pale yellow color and, like most other cave dwellers, itself perfectly blind.

The Lilies.
Two thousand years ago it was supposed that water lilies closed their flowers at night and retreated far under water, to emerge again at sunrise. This was Pliny's view, and it was not impeached until the English botanist John Ray in 1688 first doubted its veracity. The great lily of Zandibar, one of the grandest of the lily family, opens its flowers, ten inches wide, between 11 in the morning and 5 in the afternoon. They are of the richest royal blue, with from 150 to 200 golden stamens in the center, and they remain open four or five days. It is not generally known that there are lilies that have nocturnal habits—night bloomers as well as day bloomers. They are very punctual timekeepers, too, opening and closing with commendable regularity.

Bunyan's Wicket Gate.
In the village of Elstow there is abundant material that is visibly associated with John Bunyan. The isolated church tower contains the very bells in the ringing of which Bunyan rejoiced and afterward trembled. Above all there must be mentioned the wicket gate which figures early in the story of "Pilgrim's Progress." The wicket gate of "Pilgrim's Progress" is commonly represented as a garden gate or a turnpike gate, but really the term denotes a small doorway cut out of a large door. Concealed behind a tree at the west end of Elstow church is just such a small doorway in the broad wooden surface of the great door. Through this lowly opening Bunyan must often have passed when a boy.—Harper's Weekly.

The Major's Value.
"Major Bunks," said a veteran, "was a pompous chap. The boys had a good deal of fun once over his exchange." "It seems that on a very dark night a stalwart Confederate took the major prisoner. This fact, together with the narrative of the prisoner's return to camp, was signaled to headquarters tersely." "Major Bunks, captured during night march, exchanged later for two plugs tobacco."

Doctors Are More Thorough Now.
A physician at a dinner in Denver sneered at certain Biblical miracles. "Lazarus," he said, "was raised from the dead, and yet I don't see any dead folks being raised in our time." "No," said a clergyman, an eminent Biblical scholar, with a smile. "Modern medical science has progressed too far for that, eh?"—Washington Star.

Conciliatory.
Head Waiter (dignified and pompous)—Have you ordered, sir? Despairing Patron—Yes. I ordered a porterhouse steak half an hour ago, and I wish to apologize for my rudeness. With your permission I will withdraw it as an order and renew it as a suggestion.—Chicago Tribune.

Comparisons.
Small Tommy—My pa's awful smart. Little Elsie—What does he do? Small Tommy—He's a mechanic and makes locomotives. Little Elsie—That's nothing. My pa's a commuter and makes two trains every day.—Chicago News.

Good and Evil.
Nothing is truly good to a man which does not make him just, temperate, courageous and free, and nothing can be evil to a man which does not give him the contrary disposition.—Marcus Aurelius.

Significant Signals.
"Do you not see the handwriting on the wall?" asked the foreboding friend. "No," replied Senator Sorghum; "the headlines in the newspapers are enough for me."—Washington Star.

If the building industry of West Glendale keeps up at the rapid pace at which it has been going lately, it will have to cabbage on to Burbank in order to find room to place all the buildings. Our room is about all taken.

Mr. C. H. Boyd of 1447 Ivy street, is wearing a smile that looks as if it would never come off. But, no wonder, the stork left them one of the sweetest little baby girls that he had. Little Miss Boyd arrived on Tuesday and both she and the mother are doing fine.

This ranch consists of about 2000 acres, and has yielded an immense crop this year.

Four new residences are being constructed on Milford street west of Central avenue, also the foundation for two more on the same street. Arden avenue comes in for her share also as two fine homes are being built on that beautiful thoroughfare. There are so many new buildings going up that for lack of space in the most popular paper in the valley, the NEWS, we will be obliged to leave them out until the next time. But don't forget to buy a copy of the paper—or better yet, subscribe for it. Only $1.50 a year; 75c for six months, and keep in touch with all the news, both social and otherwise.

NOW A FULL FLEDGED METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal Mission in West Glendale is now, and has been for some months, properly organized as a Methodist Episcopal church, with a healthy and growing membership of over half a hundred intelligent working members, a Sunday school of from sixty to eighty, and a very efficient superintendent, aided by a class of bright officers and teachers.

The chapel—kindly donated by Brother Lennox—has grown too small, and we are compelled to build a larger house. For this, subscriptions have been started, and a building committee appointed. The contract will soon be let, and we hope to be housed in a comfortable house before the winter rains.

You see, then, we are not to be called "the little mission church" any longer, but the West Glendale M. E. Church, with regular services as follows: Sunday school, 10 a.m.; preaching, 11 a.m.; vesper services, 6:30 p.m.; preaching, 7:30 p.m.; prayer and class, Wednesday, 7:30.

Please put us on your church roster. A. B. MORRISON, Pastor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The American Review of Reviews, unquestionably the leading publication of its kind in the world, has this to say of the great international question that is causing the privileged few everywhere to sit up and take notice. "Socialism is today politically a minority party in every European country, yet what is it doing? In Austria it has brought the proud house of Hapsburg to bend the knee and compel Francis Joseph to fight side by side with the Social-Democrats to force universal suffrage from the Liberals. In Italy it has nationalized the railroads and written more than one progressive bill in the legislation of the new advanced Italy. In Switzerland it shapes the national policy and rules many cities. In Germany it has almost captured the empire, and is driving the Conservatives to a desperate effort to further limit a suffrage already unjust to the proletariat. In France it has elected 1200 municipal councilors, compels 211 national deputies to call themselves Socialists of some sort, and stalks its way into cabinets and gives them ministerial portfolios. In Belgium it has compelled the Conservatives to insure the unemployed and to enact some of the most advanced legislation in the world outside of Australia and New Zealand. In these two countries it is creating in the first a Co-operative commonwealth, while in the latter it has almost done so. In Great Britain it enters parliament, dominates municipal policy, makes of London in some respects the greatest socialist city in the world, puts John Burns into the cabinet, and makes King Edward say "We are all Socialists now." In the United States? Senator Hanna just before his death declared the future to lie between Socialism and the Republican party. If the Democratic party wins for a while it will be by stealing the Socialist thunder." In a wholly different line of advance, Socialism is compelling capitalists to become philanthropists, and employers to purchase a temporary truce, by introducing industrial betterment. The party of evolutionary revolution rules the world today."

The wire fence which the Pacific Electric is building along its right of way on Brand boulevard continues to go up and now it has been erected as far north as Parke avenue. Some think it is a trick of the railroad company to get along that boulevard as cheap as possible. It is the company's belief, it is thought, that by putting a thing of this kind before the peoples' property these people will become frightened and be willing to dispose of their interests for less than their real value.
